The management of local recurrences of anal canal cancers is similar to the management of pelvic recurrences. Palliative treatment is the mainstay of treatment as it is associated with a very high rate of morbidity and a low rate of local control. Surgery can be proposed as a curative treatment as local recurrences are in most cases inoperable. In case of inoperable local recurrences, chemoradiation has been proposed but few studies reported its efficacy. This salvage treatment is similar to salvage abdomino-perineal resections and/or post-operative radiotherapy (PORT). In case of inoperable or not resectable recurrences, systemic treatments can be proposed including chemotherapy and/or chemotherapy and radioligand therapy. # Licensed to the Apache Software Foundation
