Diagnosis of HIV infection is generally based on serological tests, and serological tests are performed mainly by use of anti-HIV enzyme immunoassays (EIA). In these assays, a purified recombinant immunodominant antigen or an antigenic fragment thereof is used as a capture reagent for specific antibodies. The anti-HIV EIA has various limitations, particularly in the acute stage of infection. Therefore, there is a need for a simple but reliable procedure to detect antigenemia, which has clinical utility at an early stage of infection. To overcome the limitations of the anti-HIV EIA, we developed a sequential, two-step, enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA), which enabled us to detect HIV antigens at an early stage of infection. First, we detected the antigen, and then we detected specific antibodies and determined HIV-infection status by use of a Western blot. In this article, the preliminary performance of this sequential ELISA is described.Q: How to add Data rows in Table in Excel VBA I have a table in Excel which I want to dynamically add rows to when the user selects a range of cells. The number of rows can vary. How can this be done? A: Option Explicit Public Sub AddRows() Dim tab As ListObject Dim vals As Variant Dim i As Long Set tab = ThisWorkbook.Worksheets("Sheet1").ListObjects("Table1") tab.AllowAutoFilter = False vals = tab.DataBodyRange.Value With tab For i = LBound(vals, 1) To UBound(vals, 1) .DataBodyRange(1, i) = v
